SID ENGEL - HOURLY WEB DEVELOPMENT CONTRACT

Web Development Contractor Agreement

Developer:_____

Client: _____

Date: _____

TERMS OF SERVICE

This document briefly outlines terms of service and expectations for my role as a developer, and yours as a client.

EXPECTATIONS

As a developer, you can expect me to produce quality code conforming to current web standards. I will strive to create the cleanest, and most elegant code possible, with very little to no "quick fixes".

BILLING STRUCTURE

I bill per hour (unless a specific contract for a set amount of work is agreed upon otherwise) at an hourly rate of _____. Each line item will be described and commented on the invoice and time is specified in units of _____. Time billed constitutes development time, meeting/working-session time, and in general any other time at my expense geared toward your project with the exception of any travel time. Meetings that incur a fair amount of small talk and/or non-business activity will not be billed.

PAYMENT & INVOICING

The rate of invoicing depends on the amount of monthly work, but typically I invoice twice a month. Payment should be postmarked within _____ of the invoice date, though I always appreciate payment as soon as possible. After _____ of non-payment, I reserve the right to put work on hold until payment is received.

ADDENDUM

Work is limited to a maximum of _____ unless additional hours are pre-coordinated with the client. All source code and other artifacts developed under this agreement will remain the sole property of the client.
